Children of Babylon

By EFFIE SPOFFORTH

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

The boy, once back in his ball bed-room, threw himself down on the narrow bed and remained there motionless, his eyes closed. Sometimes when he came home from the warehouse he was physically tired like this. He was only twenty-one, and the contrast between the hopes with which he had gone to the great city and actually was harder than the physical fatigue.

He worked at eight dollars a week, packing books for Vincent & Co., publishers. With a high school education and literary aspirations, he ought to be able to do something better than that.

"We'll give you a chance in the basement," Vincent had told him. "If you make good there an opportunity may arise upstairs."

"I'll take it," the boy had answered. At half-past seven the following morning the boy went to work. He had worked there for four months. He did not know that Vincent was trying to get him out of the warehouse as a chance for him, first at clerical work and then if he proved efficient in a minor role among the literary staff of the publishing company.

Vincent had had his eye on him all the while, as was his way. He had asked the foreman of the department two or three times if the boy was still there. Next month, perhaps, he would give himself the sincere pleasure of moving the boy to accept fifteen dollars and assist Mr. Jones, the advertising manager, in a clerical capacity.

Of all that the boy knew nothing. He only saw himself hammering nails into packing cases, among a crowd of ignorant, and not too high-minded associates.

And often he had thought of giving up and going back to the farm, to face the sneers of the neighbors, the silent reproaches of his father, and, worst of all, his mother's pity.

Then temptation had come to him. There was a man named Dutton among the employees. Dutton had shown him friendliness, had won his confidence.

"You're a fool, boy, to look forward to a life of this sort of work," he said. "There's a easy money to be picked up in this city. Now listen to me."

In the lunch hour he had outlined a plan by which money was to be "picked up" as he phrased it. It involved plain robbery. But, though the boy shrank away from it at first, the suggestion, the plausibility of the man worked on his mind and the temptation proved a real one in spite of his scruples.

Dutton had learned a secret about the safe. Every house has its secrets. Its weak points in its defensive system. On Saturday nights there was often a sum of two or three thousand dollars in the safe. The night watchman was an old man. The safe was not a new one. The boy's part would be simply to engage the old fellow in conversation until the confederates got their opportunity to hit him on the head and take the keys. For that five hundred dollars was to be his.

And, so strangely is the human mind fashioned, that the boy had felt that, to tell Vincent, would be a betrayal of confidence. The atmosphere of the packing room was not a good one. The boy had gone home and flung himself down on his bed, and his mind was in a turmoil.

In the next room the girl had come home and flung herself into the ancient arm-chair with which the landlady had supplied her when it became too shabby for use in the parlor. She felt utterly unworried after her day at the department store.

She had worked there at six dollars a week for nearly half a year. When she left the little country town, equipped with a good education, she had confidently expected to take the city by storm. In fact, she was an artist of rare ability.

But what is the use of ability unless someone has brains to recognize it? So day by day she had besieged the offices with her drawings. Once she had sold one, and she had lived on that lingering hope until the remainder of her money was gone. Then, at her wits' end, she had accepted the position which the landlady told her could be obtained at Darrow's.

She had lost all faith in herself. She had worked like an automaton.

Aristocratic Patriarch.
Marquise d'Harvillour, who has just celebrated her one hundredth birthday, is one of the most interesting and notable figures of the noble Faubourg St. Germain, in Paris, where she is treated as the universally venerated patriarch of the French aristocracy. Her husband, who died about twenty-two years ago, was one of the principal chamberlains of Napoleon III, while her father was the sixth duke of Mortemart, head of the house of Rochefort.

Therefore the grandaunt of the present Duc de Mortemart, a man of sixty, who is himself a grandaunt.

French Roads in War Time.
At the Vosges front the roads were perfect; as good wherever we went in this mountain country as from New York to Poughkeepsie. I need not tell you this if you have been in France; but you will be interested to know that Lorraine keeps her roads in perfect repair even in war time—Frederick Palmer in Collier's Weekly.

for four months and had done nothing. Her best drawing, one which she had thought would make the client, had never been returned to her from the magazine to which she had submitted it, and she had lacked the courage to call and inquire about it.

At Darrow's she had toiled behind the counter of the hosiery department, at the beck and call of vulgar, frock-coated floorwalkers, a cipher among ciphers. She felt crushed by this atmosphere that surrounded her. She felt utterly out of place among the young women, of different type and education, with whom she came into touch; and they, sensing the difference, were not slow to let her perceive their resentment.

Then temptation had come to her, too. It had been in less lustrous guise than with the boy. It was not one of the floorwalkers, but the son of the owner, young Darrow, fresh from college and taking his first before settling down in the north. He had come into the store with his mother, who was making some purchase there.

With worldly wisdom he had not approached her while the other clerks were present. But he had found the means to see her twice or three times. And he had asked her to dine with him the following evening.

She was not ignorant of the world. She saw from his demeanor that it did not occur to him that she was anything but one of the underbred, underpaid clerks in his father's store. She had known what significance would attach itself to her acceptance. But she was desperately lonely, and the thought of an evening in a restaurant, and at a theater afterward, the sight of other faces, the touch with life was overwhelming.

"I'll have to accept or go home," she thought wearily.

If she could have known at that moment a letter, signed by the editor of the magazine, enclosing a check for seventy-five dollars for her drawing, and asking for more, lay in the wastebasket beside the desk of the editor's stenographer, ready to be posted on the morrow—if she could have known!

She got up from her chair. The boy was going out of his room at the same moment. They knew each other by sight; sometimes they sat near each other in the cheap little restaurant where they got their meals whenever they could afford the luxury.

They were both too shy to speak to each other, and desperately alone, but now, staring into each other's faces in the deserted hall on the top story of the rooming house, they drew toward each other like abandoned birds drawn by some current into a vortex.

"Are you going to dinner?" asked the boy timorously.

"Yes," she answered, looking at him with shy approval.

"Let's go together," he said, greatly daring.

They descended the stairs together. At the street door she took his arm, and they proceeded toward the restaurant, without a word being spoken.

That was the most wonderful meal either of them had ever had. Their conversation was monosyllabic, but there was little need of words in the happiness of this strange sympathy. And afterward they strolled together up and down the lit streets. They paused at the theater door. Women in costly furs, accompanied by men in evening clothes, were going in.

"I'm glad I'm not among that crowd," thought the girl, and wondered how many young Darrows there were among them.

And the boy, utterly ashamed at the thought of the temptation that had come to him, and feeling himself wholly unworthy of the girl whose arm was still linked in his, was planning to see Mr. Vincent on the next morning at nine and tell him of the conspiracy.

"It's great, isn't it?" said the boy. "Just living, I mean."

"Yes, it's great," the girl answered, and she knew then that she would have strength to refuse young Darrow and to remain at her post. It was only a moment's post in the outskirts of civilization, but suddenly she felt like a soldier.

"I thought once of going home and giving up—all this," said the boy vaguely, as they strolled homeward.

"But now I'm going to stay," she said.

"And I'm going to stay, too," the girl answered.

They reached the door and went up the stairs together in silence. At her door the girl turned.

"I have enjoyed it so much," she said. "I have spent such a happy evening. She blushed at her own audacity. "It has meant such a lot to me—you don't know how much."

"You don't know how much to me also," he answered. And he never knew how it came about, but the next minute they were in each other's arms, and her lips met his in that first kiss which everybody knows to be the sweetest.

"We'll fight it out together," said the boy.

Notable Tree.
Recruits are now drilling upon what is declared to be the finest expanse of grass in the heart of London—that in the gardens of Gray's Inn. In these gardens stands a remarkable tree, a catalpa, which was brought from the United States by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1595, and was planted at Gray's Inn by Lord Francis Bacon, then a resident there.

A shoot was later taken from the parent tree, this shoot producing an even finer tree than the Raleigh specimen. From this second tree a shoot was also taken, this shoot being shipped to the United States and planted in Philadelphia, where it is now a flourishing tree. The grandson of the Raleigh tree has thus come back to the home of its fathers.

Argument Against Burning.
Church—I see bonds worth $1,600 were recovered from a garbage can at the rear of a lodging house in Chicago by detectives. They had been thrown away by mistake.

Go home—You see there are arguments why garbage should not be burned, after all.

DECREES CHANGE IN PARTING OF THE HAIR.

Calls for Considerable Skill in Arrangement—Open Psyche Knot Is General—Tresses Must Be Neat in the Back.

A fashion that has been shelved is the parting of the hair in front or at the side, although there is a definite line of carrying the hair from left to right, or right to left. That is the difference between the coiffure of 1890 and today. Sleek as the hair is, it goes across the head sideways, especially in the back, where it is drawn up into a French twist that has all been pinned flat and straightened out, so that there will be no bulge in the smoothness of the back of the head.

There is no fashion against the outlining of this flat French twist by a long ornamental comb, but that is only possible in the evening, and many fashionable women prefer to do without it.

There is great skill in the way the hair is brushed across the head and twisted into tresses and it is this style of coiffure which is the most difficult for a woman to arrange herself. It is better done when the hair is slightly marcelled, to give it body. This is not possible if a woman has heavy long hair, which so many Americans possess. If she waves it, it also thickens it and is compelled to work out something original with the long ends.

As she must dispose of these left-overs in some fashion, the law allows her to roll them into an open Psyche knot on top of the head. In the evening she can catch this knot down with two small ornamental pins, preferably of jet, and in the daytime the small turban will fit neatly over the knot.

The one law that must not be broken in the coiffure of the day is the straight, clean line upward from the nape of the neck to the lower edge of the crown. Short hairs are apt to make this line broken and tightly across and sewn together at the edges, which are afterwards finished off with a dress cord. To the lower edge three silk ribbons are sewn on and they are covered with narrow ribbon twisted round and round them.

For suspending this little article from a nail in the wall, a loop of ribbon with a smart rosette bow at the top is sewn on at the back. In front there are two small loops of ribbon with bows above them, into which a pocket-knife, pen, pencil, etc., may be slipped and held in position in the manner shown. The hooks underneath will be found very useful in many ways, and possibly the key of the clock, a small pair of scissors and a watch may be hung upon them.

TO MAKE FLORAL BUTTONS
May Be Constructed to Harmonize With Any Part of the Costume To Be Worn.

Floral does not allude to the shape of the buttons, but to their color which is chosen to harmonize with gown, blouse, coat or hat. Take fresh bread crumbs and carefully grate them with a pulverizer into light flakes. To every four heaped teaspoonful of the flaked crumbs add a level teaspoonful of suitable satchel powder. Rose satchel answers for buttons in dark red, rose pink and pale pink. Heliotrope satchel is used for various tones in that color.

A fixative is made from one heaping tablespoonful of white flour, into which has been mixed gradually and freely from lumps one-half cupful of cold water. Let stand 24 hours in a warm place. When ready to use, mix carefully. Add to the perfume bread crumbs enough fixative to make a paste stiff enough to be handled. Now add a few drops of vegetable coloring and mix.

Put the paste into the desired size for the buttons and mold into shape. Dip the beads into glue and pat into the button with the aid of a needle. Take some fine white covered hat wire, make a small loop and twist the two ends together to form a point to be inserted into the paste. Dip the point in glue and insert in the paste. Place the completed buttons in a box in a dry place for a week.

The edges of the bolero are stitched to the net. Points of the ribbon edged with the net plaiting are used to edge the seams and cuffs. Velvets, tinsel, brocade, striped or printed ribbon could be used for such a bolero.

Sweet grass circles are put in the bottom of ribbon bags, which are made in every shape and size of one, two or three different kinds of ribbon. They are filled at the top with a silk cord or ribbon hanger. Bags made of ribbon could be used for such a bolero.

SHAPING IT UP.

The Whitewater Gazette, a Progressive Republican paper, gives the following interesting analysis of the present political trend:

"The landslide to Mayor-elect William Hale Thompson in Chicago evidences a national rather than a local trend. There is no doubt that some of his unprecedented majority was due to bitterly opposing factions in the Democratic ranks. It is true that religious bigotry and intolerance played their part in the game. It is also true that direct political appeal, made to the voter on the ground of Fatherland affiliations, rather than straight American political sentiment, had its measure of effect. But with all these factors at this time a tendency to rally to and William Barnes. And perhaps the political principle of Joe Cannon in the order of things this is as well, for nothing will go so far as the re-election of President Wilson as for the Republican party to repeat its victory of its National convention of 1912 at Chicago.

"As things are now shaping themselves, Wilson will be the only nominee of the Democratic party; there is no other Democrat who has a show. His chance for re-election to the presidency is only seriously threatened by the reunion of the Progressive and Republican parties. The return to Congress such men as Cannon and McKinley, the election through the Wisconsin, and the election of a Lorrain to an overwhelming majority to the mayor's office in Chicago, all the old standard forces with a confident feeling that the people are ready to go back to the old political regime. They, therefore, will play the 'safe' political game of nominating some such a reactionary candidate as Herriek or Penrose. Such action will, of course, shut the door to any possibility of compromise or amalgamation with the Progressives, but will inject a new inspiration and determination into the Progressive party. It will force that party into a new and really vital life. It will cease to be a personal party; it will no longer be Roosevelt's party; it will be a real political party. This party will divide the Republican party so as to insure the election of President Wilson.

"In his speech at Indianapolis, President Wilson very truthfully said: 'The independent voters of the country have the say who will be elected of the two parties.' In the case of the Progressive party it will hold the balance of the power and though they fail to elect their own candidate they will reflect the election of Wilson. For no real Progressive, whatever his party may be, will vote for the kind of candidate that the reactionary Republicans now seem to be sure to name."

Where He Got It.

The greatest income in Chicago subject to income tax is that of Julian Rosenwald, principal stockholder in the firm of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Not many years ago Rosenwald had but a few hundred dollars in his own name. Last year his income was over $1,250,000, all derived, along with much more, from a line of business that rightfully belongs to Burlington.

Some day perhaps, people will awaken to the fact that Rosenwald and his company are not doing business for mere pleasure—their vast income proves this, and some day perhaps, people will awaken to the fact that every dollar sent to this big mail order house robs their community of just that much—for it never returns to our business channels.

Every dollar spent in Burlington aids just that much in building up and supporting our own stores, banks, schools, churches, municipal utilities and the homes of our own people. Every dollar sent from here to Chicago is lost forever to our own locality and is added to the vast capital of the Chicago concern. Mr. Rosenwald will pay a tax on a million and a quarter income, but how much of that tax will Burlington receive to build up its roads, light its streets, improve its schools or care for its river bridges? Stop! Look! Listen! It may be worth your while—Burlington Standard Democrat.

Mary Ann Bill Repealed.

According to reports from the State Capitol, the "Mary Ann Bill" has passed out of existence. That is, it has been repealed, and the fact that it has passed out of existence has hardly caused a ripple. There are a class of men on this earth who seem to spend the greater part of their time evolving schemes for the betterment of mankind, and every once in a while there is an upheaval and a new plan is brought forth. It is full of technical phrases and it takes a lawyer to explain it to an ordinary man, and then probably half of them never master the proposition. The "Mary Ann Bill" was one of these. It was a bill to repeal the law which provided that a woman who had been married and who had a child, and who was living with a man, should be considered as a married woman. The bill was introduced by a man named Arthur Voigt, who is a business caller at Plover one day last week. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Williams spent Sunday afternoon at the Peter Ferguson home. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharrier, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. George Schroeder, all of Grand Rapids, came out in their car to call on Lulu Nelson Sunday.

A number of both young and old people gave Mr. and Mrs. Young a surprise party last Saturday night. Friday being a busy day, everybody was busy clearing up their yards. The school children were also busy, and after the yard the school was cleaned, they having a fine picnic dinner. If a woman would try to make as much of an impression on her husband when she is at home as she tries to make on strangers when she is out there wouldn't be so many unhappy marriages.

Keep live stock receipts down. Commission houses, prominent feeders and shippers and live stock journals have steadily urged this ever since the quarantine area has been established at the stock yards in Chicago. This wisdom of this advice has been shown, too, by market conditions, when the supply was kept low. Yard experts say that a little care and precaution exercised by country shippers will cause continued support of good markets. The yards are being rapidly cleaned and the free area will be soon free to receive shipments. The prospects are bright for those continuing live stock production. They are practically certain to reap profits great enough to offset any present losses.

Puzzled Grant.

Grant and Sherman were discussing the plans of a campaign when a third general, a brigadier, entered the tent—a good soldier, but notorious for his carelessness as to his personal appearance. The brigadier finished his errand and went out. General Grant pulled upon his cigar for a few minutes in silence and then said, "Sherman, I wonder whom that man gets to wear his shirts the first week."

A Good Town.

Here are some words from Edward K. Graham in Harper's Weekly that are in such thorough accord with the doctrine of city building advanced by this newspaper from time to time that we cannot resist reprinting them.

"We do not ask for the biggest town or the richest town, so that the people at the top can have enough money to stop work. We do ask the wisdom enough to know what the permanent and progressively good things to work for are, the civic will to work for them, the material prosperity to put wheels under them to make them go.

"What we have learned is that it is wise to work together for a good place in which to live—a good town; in a good country. In a good state; and we mean by a good place to live, a place both to make a good living and to live a good life—good money, good water, good streets, good schools, good churches. A good place to live is a good place to invest money and get bigger returns, and to invest life and get bigger returns.

"Whatever promotes the material welfare of the largest number of people is an essential of good government as it is of good education and of good religion. Good citizenship is a fierce struggle in our business to take all the other fellow has and then endow a school or church for him to go for consolation. Big men in business are more and more coming to discover the value of profit-sharing and co-operation between all factors, even in business itself; and fortunate will be that community which extends to every detail of its economic life that same doctrine of fraternal co-operation which gave us democratic government and Christian religion."

With the city as with the individual there can be no prosperity while while that is not based on order, equity and a sincere devotion to the common good. A good town implies a town that is rounded out equally in all desirable phases.

IT IS ORDERED, That said application be heard before this court, at a special term thereof, to be held at the Probate Office, in the City of Grand Rapids, on the 10th day of June, A. D. 1915, at 10 o'clock A. M.

There is nothing more irritating to the people of a small town than the air of superiority that the people from larger towns have toward them and their village. It is hard to say just what prompts the city man to feel greater than the villager, but he almost invariably does, and what makes it worse shows it in his actions. It is the weakness of city people, this belief of theirs that country people are back numbers. The man from a city concern pays a country business man a visit and shows plainly that he considers the little merchant a very small potato; but if he were wise enough to realize the truth of their respective businesses, he would know that the back-numbered merchant, as he looks upon him, is laying by each year more than the city chap is drawing as a hired man from a company that could find a thousand like him in a day's time. The narrow-minded lecturer drops into the small town, and at the beginning of his talk mentions that he has changed his subject, "for fear the one announced would be over the heads of his audience," and then proceeds to ramble along for a couple of hours with stale stories with disconnected ideas, boring his auditors half to death. The Chautauque entertainer, until he has had a good deal of experience, the traveling salesman, up to the time he becomes of some value to the house; the transient visitor, on a chance business or pleasure trip; the young city employee, before he learns the lessons of the relation of capital to business, wherever it is employed—all of them make the same mistake of misjudging the capacity, the intelligence and the character of country people. If there is such a thing as superiority between city and country folks, the latter have the best opportunity of securing it. But as people, there is no difference between those who live in cities and those who live in the country. They all read the same newspapers, the same magazines, and the same books; they hear the same lectures, and see the same theatrical performances; they attend the same high schools and graduate from the same colleges and universities; they take the same trips, visit the same vacation resorts, and make as many excursions abroad; they ride in Pullmans so often, and it is hard to point out any difference between them, except that the country people have the advantage of freedom from the life in throngs, and from the scramble for a livelihood with great numbers contesting for a share. We have no contempt or criticism for those who prefer to live in a city, but we do object to their attitude of scorn for the doings of those who live in the country or small towns. There is no basis for their feeling of superiority, and, to a person with a proper understanding of the relations of things, it is nonsensical and uncalled-for.—Ex.

Meeting of Bandmen.

A meeting was held on Monday evening at the west side city hall for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment of the old band members in regard to organizing a musical organization in this city during the coming summer.

A number responded to the call, and besides those that were present there are a number in the city who have made the statement that they will go into such an organization and do what they can to promote musical matters in the city.

Another meeting will be held on Thursday evening of this week, when it is expected that other members will be heard from and that some definite action can be taken on the matter.

There is no question but what there is a demand for a brass band in this city, and those of the boys who propose to organize at this time are doing so with the hope that this fall it will be possible to secure a good director and thus again put Grand Rapids on the musical map.

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Bird of Stevens Point spent Sunday in this city visiting with friends and relatives.

They are not going to try to make the run in record time, or anything of that sort, but will saunter along and see the country as they go and stop wherever they run across anything of interest.

The completion of a new road across the country makes a trip like this not only possible for a man and his family, but a great part of the road has been negotiated with pleasure, and there are now comparatively few places where the shovel and pick are called into use, although travelers are advised to take precautions of this sort with them in case they attempt the trip.

Assemblyman Newcomb Spoor declared that when the original bill, which carried a definite appropriation, was before the finance committee, it was stated that the proposition, if passed by the legislature would be vetoed. "I believe in specific appropriations," said Mr. Spoor, "and when the committee was told the measure would be vetoed, I left the room. I do not propose to sit in a hearing on any proposition when we are told that if we pass a measure it will be vetoed."

Senate Bills Advanced.

Among the senate bills sent to a third reading were the Fairchild bill for a lot and block system for assessing property in the city of Milwaukee. The bill in cities of the first class, the Wisconsin bill abolishing the office of water registrar in Milwaukee; the Fairchild bill authorizing cities of the first class to issue bonds for park purposes; the Fairchild bill authorizing cities of the first class to issue short term bonds for street improvements and the bill to appropriate $8,000 for equipping the tuberculosis camp in the forest reserve.

The senate adopted a resolution recalling from the governor for a slight amendment the Standen bill relating to the laying of sewer, water and gas pipes in villages. Senator George Skogmo had his bill appropriating $10,000 to defray expenses of the proposed legislative state marketing investigation committee referred to the state affairs committee.

Tax Changes Not Favored.

Senator Bray introduced a substitute for the Martin bill increasing the list of properties in which trust funds may be invested. The finance committee recommended for indefinite postponement the Bennett measure exempting farmers' associations and co-operative creamery corporations from the income tax law and the Arnold bill providing for the adoption of the single tax system, and increasing the rates of the inheritance and income tax laws.

The passage of a bill providing that the statute relating to the commitment of insane persons to the state insane asylums shall also apply to commitments to the hospital for the criminal insane at Waupun and a bill appropriating $500 to the Wisconsin Potato Growers' association to disburse unpaid claims against the association.

The senate indulged in a discussion of the business of trust companies, and at the close of the debate, the Tomkins bill was ordered engrossed, instead of indefinitely postponed in accordance with its position on the calendar. The Tomkins bill prohibits trust companies from selling securities owned by the company to trust estates for which the company is acting.

Medical Bills Delayed.

Sensor Frank Hanson has received another setback in his fight to have the election pamphlet abolished. Action on his bill was deferred when Senator W. J. Eichler introduced a substitute measure. Eichler's amendment modifies the present law but does not abolish the use of the pamphlet.

Action on the Ackley bill to regulate the practice of optometry, and the Tomkins bill to regulate the practice of chiropractic was deferred.

The Bray bill creating an investigating committee to look into charges of misconduct and mismanagement in any branch of state government was referred to the committee

RAIL BODY MAKES AWARD

Engineers and Firemen's Agents Will Not Sign the Agreement—Given Slight Increase.

Chicago, May 3.—The western railroad arbitration board handed down its award on Friday in the case of 650 engineers and firemen who had asked for a 10 per cent increase in wages and changes in working conditions.

Representatives on the board of the engineers and firemen refused to sign the award. They declared it granted no increase in wages and that in many cases wages would be reduced if it were not for the clause in the award that where wages are higher now, they shall not be affected.

W. S. Carter contended the wages in every engine west of Chicago was higher now than granted by the award. In the case of a light engine there was a slight increase.

Here and there the engineers reported the award was derided.

"We will take our medicine," said President Carter.

The statement is as follows: "During the night of May 1 and 2 and the night of May 2 and 3 the enemy launched strong and determined attacks in mass against our positions, constantly bringing fresh troops."

"Not only did the allies repulse every attack, inflicting enormous losses on the enemy, but we assumed the offensive, drove the enemy out of their positions and are now advancing into the interior of the peninsula."

In a dispatch from Athens received by the London Exchange Telegraph company the declaration is made that the valley of the Maritsa has entered fresh negotiations with the allies for the surrender of the town.

A Tencos dispatch to the Daily News says: "Fierce fighting continues day and night in the Dardanelles. The ships of the fleet are working in shifts and the bombardment is incessant. In spite of desperate resistance, we have made steady progress, both on land and sea. The most vital points of the enemy's defenses now are strongly invested."

The bombardment of the Turkish forts on the Gulf of Smyrna has been resumed, according to messages received at Athens from the allies. The Turkish transport has been sunk, according to an admiralty report issued on Friday.

U. S. SHIP TORPEDOED

SUPPOSED SUBMARINE ATTACK KILLS THREE AMERICANS.

Oil Steamer Gulfight Bound From Port Arthur, Tex., to Rouen, France, Badly Damaged.

London, May 4.—The American oil steamer Gulfight was torpedoed in the English channel on Saturday by a German submarine. Her captain died of heart disease from the shock and two members of her crew of 35 were drowned.

The Gulfight, a 3,200-ton ship, owned by the Gulf Refining company of Texas, was bound from Port Arthur, Tex., to Rouen with a cargo of naphtha when she was attacked off Bishop lighthouse, in the Scilly islands.

The vessel, although badly damaged, stayed afloat and was towed to shore by steam drifters and beached. The crew of the vessel were rescued by a tugboat and the ship was towed to a safe harbor.

The Gulfight is the fourth American steamer destroyed either by mines or submarines in the sea war zone since February 18 and the fifth American vessel sunk in all. The William P. Frye having been sunk in the South Atlantic by the German raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

SAVE POTATO TRADE.

Warning Sent Out by Wisconsin Growers' Association.

"If Wisconsin potato growers are to continue to lead in the production of superior seed and table stock, every possible precaution must be taken to prevent the introduction of tuber diseases."

This is the note of warning which the officials of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' association out over the state in order to prevent the introduction of potato scab and other diseases into Wisconsin.

Because of the presence of powdery scab, the Federal Horticultural Board found it necessary to quarantine certain of the eastern potato growing centers finding that even slight infestations of this disease could not be detected by any practical plan of inspection, the government has discontinued certifying seed stock coming from infested districts.

Thorough inspection has shown that Wisconsin is free from this dreaded disease. To aid in keeping our fields free from infection a plan of official inspection and certification of potato seed stock has been inaugurated which gives promise of greatly protecting and developing our potato growing industry.

Representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture are co-operating with officials of the experimental station in the inspection and certifying of our seed stock.

Growers living in Barron, Door, Eau Claire, Forest, Langlade, Lincoln, Oneida, Portage, Rusk, Sawyer, Waupaca, Waushara and Wood counties have been granted certificates for this season. It is estimated that between 1,500 and 2,000 bushels of certified seed stock was produced in the state last year. This will be sold to community growers this spring for the purpose of establishing seed growing centers. The plan of certification is fully outlined in a bulletin just published by the agricultural Experimental Station at Madison.

GREAT GAIN RECORDED.

Dr. Louis Frank, a member of one of Milwaukee's pioneer families, has completed a medical history of Milwaukee which is of great interest and value to the people of the entire state.

To my mind, nothing in Dr. Frank's book is more illuminating than the tables in which he shows of what disease the people died, year by year, for the past forty years. As a part of this study, he has compiled a table showing the most important causes of death for the past twenty years as compared with the preceding twenty.

Today as you frequently see in reports from Health Departments, pneumonia and tuberculosis are the most frequent causes for death, whereas, from 1870 to 1891 convulsions and intestinal diseases of children headed the list. During the last twenty years, convulsions is tenth, due to more intelligent feeding and caring for infants. Whereas smallpox ranked fourth as the cause of death from 1870 to 1891, from 1892 to 1914 it is at the bottom of the list. Practically no deaths are due from smallpox today.

Diphtheria changed its position from fifth in the early period to eighth in the latter period. Antitoxin is chiefly responsible for this decrease. Scarlet fever was seventh from 1870 to 1891; from 1892 to 1914 it was fifteenth. Better quarantine secured this increased safety. Meningitis was relatively much less important in the last twenty years than it was in the preceding twenty years; typhoid and measles somewhat less.

The most abrupt jumps upward in the second period from the position occupied in the early period are made by kidney disease from seventeenth to sixth; cancer from fourteenth to fifth; heart disease from tenth to third; and pneumonia from sixth to first.

Dr. Frank's table is not built on actual increase or decrease in numbers, but upon change of position. Obviously, therefore, when smallpox drops from the top of one column to the bottom of the parallel column, it has had to crowd more common diseases nearer the head of the list. Nevertheless, this table gives point and general confirmation to the truth recently pointed out in this column, that common life and the degenerative diseases of adult life are increasing.

The above gains offer encouragement to, and great promise from increasing intelligent care of infants; in all cases of diphtheria and membranous croup; and enforcing quarantine in all cases of scarlet fever.

Joe, McGirr of Leola town in Adams County was visiting in our locality looking for three yearling colts and a sorrel mare that strayed from his farm Thursday. While scouting Sunday he spent a pleasant hour exchanging yarns and absorbing some of the home cheer of your humble scribe. Anyone being the stray colts, the cat was Mr. McGirr's favor by communicating with him and receive pay for their trouble.

The old Schewe farm is receiving a thorough plover hauling and we enjoy seeing improvements being carried on in our town.

Axel Peterson who has been in Chicago for some time has returned home.

Mrs. Anderson of Chicago, a sister of Mrs. Axel Peterson, accompanied Mr. Peterson home and will spend some time visiting relatives.

Lee B. Margery has a great quantity of lilacs which are almost in bloom and promise a great abundance of flowers. Anyone wishing flowers call on Lee and there are enough to supply quite a demand.

While we were in town last Saturday we had the pleasure of a trip thru Mr. G. J. Kautsky's shanty and saw some very nice work, both finished and being done. We admit we were caught in the act of looking for the venerable on a solid Mahogany sewing table, but the taking out and explaining one of the drawers to the venerable convinced us that we would have to look farther.

One of the most striking fact of interest to us, who have seen one or two of the large establishments and noted the manner of the employees was the entire absence of all fear of the boss. No one jumped upon looking over his shoulder and unexpectedly seeing the boss and each man continued his gait or continued to do nothing, just as he had been when the boss entered. We will venture the opinion that Mr. Kautsky has very little labor troubles and few threats of strikes. We think that the factory showed that both the boss and the hired know what to expect of each party.

We were informed by Mr. K. F. Knutson that Mrs. Knutson is in very poor health being bothered by sciatica. He has arranged to content a trip for treatment to Dr. Hill, as soon as she is able to travel.

So—If at all possible—GO WEST NOW.

SAVE POTATO TRADE.

Warning Sent Out by Wisconsin Growers' Association.

"If Wisconsin potato growers are to continue to lead in the production of superior seed and table stock, every possible precaution must be taken to prevent the introduction of tuber diseases."

This is the note of warning which the officials of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' association out over the state in order to prevent the importation of powdery scab and other diseases into Wisconsin.

Because of the presence of powdery scab, the Federal Horticultural Board found it necessary to quarantine certain of the eastern potato growing centers. It is the opinion of the officials of the experiment station in the inspection and certifying of our seed stock.

Growers living in Barron, Door, Eau Claire, Forest, Langlade, Lincoln, Oneida, Portage, Rusk, Sawyer, Waupaca, Waushara and Wood counties have been granted certificates for this season. It is estimated that between 1,500 and 2,000 bushels of certified seed stock was produced in the state last year. This will be sold to community growers this spring for the purpose of establishing seed grow centers. The plan of certification is fully outlined in a bulletin just published by the agricultural experimental station at Madison.
